

BILIOUS PILLIQUENESS.

Why Some Bilious People Take Pills and Others Don't.

Biliousness is much misunderstood. So many people have it, that it is worth understanding, the more so as it is easily enough, if you begin right. Liver secretes a fluid called bile, which goes to the intestines, where it performs important work in digestion. Sometimes bile passages in liver get clogged. This is biliousness.

"Pilliveness" is the idea that by taking a pill which stimulates the liver, we may cure biliousness. It is only an idea. Pill-taking relieves but does not cure it. The cure can only come through the stomach.

Why? Biliousness is caused by the poison of undigested food, irritating the liver. To cure biliousness, these poisons must be got out of the stomach. The only sure way to do this is with Shaker Digestive Cordial.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is a pleasant tonic aid to digestion, prepared from roots, herbs and wine by the Shakers of Mount Lebanon. It helps the stomach to digest its food, and sweeps out of the system all dangerous poisons.

In this way it cures biliousness, headache, nausea, dizziness, bad taste, stomach-ache, fever, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, etc., when other remedies only give temporary relief. All druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

CHINESE LEGATION.

Most Interesting Family in the Diplomatic Corps.

MINISTER'S WIFE IN SOCIETY

At Washington—A Description of Mrs. Yang Yu—Wives of Former Chinese Ministers Have Generally Eschewed the Pleasures of the Social Set.

Washington Times: Of all the foreign legations in Washington, the Chinese—located out in the west end, on Fourteenth street—is the one that awakens the most interest in the public mind, and this past season the attractiveness of the legation has been greatly increased by the fact that there were ladies there, and that they were mingling in society—a thing unheard of before.

The exclusiveness of the Chinese has been proverbial since the beginning of written history, and the seclusion of their women of rank has always been one of the inexorable laws of the empire; but even Chinese conservatism has been overcome by American Democracy.

Prior to the coming of the last Chinese minister—Mr. Tsin Kwo Yin—but very few women had ever come with live in the same manner here as she the representatives of the Celestial Kingdom, and they were kept in the strictest seclusion, and it was understood that Mme. Tsin Kwo Yin would live in the same manner here as she did at home; but even the unimpeachable Celestial cannot escape the influence of his environment, and gradually the rigid retirement of the women of the legation has been overcome.

Mr. Foster's Influence.

Hon. John W. Foster was Minister Tsin Kwo Yin's legal adviser, and to his gracious wife must be given the honor of being the first lady in America who was admitted to see Mme. Tsin Kwo Yin, and it is no doubt due to her courtesy and tact that the doors were opened, allowing the ladies of the legation the same privileges that the American women enjoy.

It is rather funny now to recall with what solemnity Minister Tsin Kwo Yin sent word to Mr. Foster that he would bring his wife to return Mrs. Foster's call on such a date, and that he would call on all male members of the household in non-evidence—and they were banished, every one of them, from Mr. Foster down to the bell boy.

A maid was stationed at the door, and a maid conducted them to the drawing-room, where Mrs. Foster received them. That was the first little opening, and you can always trust a woman—whether of the Orient or of the Occident—for the rest, if the slightest entrance is made for her. From that time Madame Tsin Kwo Yin was seen more or less in public as long as she remained in this country. Madame Yang Yu, the present minister's wife, has been going everywhere since she has been here, and seeming to enjoy it all as thoroughly as a girl just out.

A Cultured Gentleman.

Minister Yang Yu is a cultured gentleman, an honored scholar of distinction in his own country. He entertains broad and advanced ideas for his land and people, and he is most hospitably inclined. They have far outstripped any previous minister's record in entertaining. Madame has had her day at home; they have given numerous dinners and other entertainments during the season, and she has dispensed the hospitality of the legation at the great house on Fourteenth street with a grace and dignity that would do honor to any American woman.

During the past season Fridays were Madame's day at home, and after this was known her receptions rivalled Mrs. Cleveland's in popularity. Minister Yang Yu received with his wife and seemed to enjoy the jam, and regard it as the proper way to be hospitable.

To most persons it was a disappointment to find that the legation was furnished with as hundreds of other houses are out in the West End, with the exception of some curious Chinese scrolls that are hung on the walls, and some handsome Chinese vases and pictures. But Madame expects to remain in America a good many years, and she has plans of her own for a house that is to be built on the legation owns its own property—which, it is anticipated, will be pretty soon now—and when that time comes she will doubtless show us what a real Chinese home is when planned and furnished after the mother country style.

Very Popular Receptions.

But by far the most interesting feature of their receptions were Minister and Madame Yang Yu themselves and their Chinese attendants. They invariably create a sensation wherever they go. They were at most of the swell affairs last winter. Madame was always the center of an animated group, making out surprisingly well with the language, while her little lord was sure to be standing smilingly observant somewhere close by with his hands run way up the flowing sleeves of his loose jacket.

At one time Mrs. Cleveland's receptions during the last season Madame Yang Yu came with her interpreter, Mr. Fse, an attaché of the legation who came to this country with the present minister and who is attending the city high school—a very bright young gentleman and exceedingly obliging in his capacity as Madame's interpreter, he glanced around the room and saw that there were no gentlemen present, so he immediately disappeared. Mr. Fse and immediately went in alone, and really seemed to get along as well as if he could talk English like the proverbial nigger.

She was dressed in rich blue and black silk, made in the never-changing Chinese style of a long, loose, shawl-like tunic, with the flowing sleeves, and a narrow, stiff skirt. Her hair was done in the conventional puffs that one always sees in the Chinese pictures and on her head she wore that striking-looking cap, with its flaring bunch of flowers on each side.

Her Personal Beauty.

This cap must indicate something of high degree, unknown to the uninitiated, as she always wears it on all state occasions. She has beautiful black eyes, if they are almond-shaped and clearcut, regular features. Of course, in America we are not quite up to admiring the very evident pink flush, which extends from Madame's eyes to her chin, nor the bright dash of carmen on her lower lip, but no doubt that it is as much admired in China as our ladies' "touch" of powder is in this country.

Her features are oval and fine, and her eyes are fairly elongated with the weight of the great earrings they carry. The earrings are of pearls and emeralds. My! the size and quality of those jewels are enough to make one break the tenth commandment.

Mme. Yang Yu is as proud of her babies as any American mother would be who had such fine ones. She often takes them with her on her rounds of calls, and all three of them frequently receive with her, certainly adding much to the picturesque of the scene. The little girls would stand close to their mother, and in the most dignified way give a high, but not a shrill, that Ward McAllister himself couldn't beat. They dress precisely like their mother—in fact, they are miniature editions of her—and are charming little bits of humanity, their black eyes are as bright as stars, their hair is of mid-night blackness, there is a bald spot on the crown of the head, and the hair is braided in four little stiff braids, which stand out at right angles from the bald spot.

They evidently knew what was expected of them, for when one of the ladies asked the older one her name, she answered quickly: "Sigourney, five year old," and was very proud of her accomplishments of English.

The youngest one's name is Wo Kee, and as she is only three she could hardly be expected to be as much of a linguist as her older sister.

But the pride of the house is the eldest child, the son and heir. He is seven years of age, and is, indeed, a promising lad.

At one of his mother's last receptions he assisted her in doing the honors. He stood by the dining room table, and as the ladies came in, he said, with great pride in his knowledge of the intricacies of the special functions, "May I give you a cup of chock-o-late?" You may be sure that that captured the ladies, and if he could have understood all the sweet things they said about him he would need to have been an uncommon boy not to have been spoiled.

Madame Yang Yu, and by the way, if we are writing that name in English we would write it Yu Yang, as the Yu is the minister's Christian name, and the Yang is his surname, but in China they have a way of doing things just backward from our way of doing them—has a dainty hand and a wee foot, a natural one, however, for it has never been bound.

A NOVEL INNOVATION.

"Mr. Chairman" will be Called by Telephone at the St. Louis Convention.

ST. LOUIS, May 11.—Five metallic telephone circuits between New York and St. Louis will be in working order before the national Republican convention begins here on June 16. No rate for talking with New York has been fixed as yet, but if the charges are anything like those that prevail throughout the state it will require a fortune to talk long over the telephone to New York.

It costs $9 for five minutes' conversation between Chicago and New York by day, and almost as much to talk to Chicago from St. Louis by a complicated roundabout connection, so it is to be expected that it will cost not far from $1 to call up New York when once the wires are put in shape.

There will be telegraph machines enough, however, for all practical purposes, so that there will be really little need for using the telephone for cities as far away as New York or Boston.

The other telephonic arrangements in the convention will be interesting indeed if they are carried out as George F. Durant, local manager of the telephone company, suggests. He wants each state delegation in the hall to be connected by phone with the platform, so that when any information is wanted on the floor all that will have to be done will be to ring up the chairman, and an operator near the president's desk will repeat the message to the chair.

Mr. Durant would substitute lamps for call bells. Here is the way he elaborated his scheme yesterday in talking to your correspondent. "If, for example," said Mr. Durant, "the Alabama delegation wanted to confer with the Alabama delegation, the chairman of the former would set the plug for Alabama's phone and lift his own off the hook. The electric lamp of Alabama's phone would be instantly lighted, so as to attract the attention of the chairman of that delegation. He would take his phone from the hook, and the light would go out. He could then carry on an extended conversation with the Missouri delegation in a low tone. It would be a comparatively noiseless proceeding.

"Use of the phone could also be made by the speaker of a delegation desiring recognition from the chair. An operator at the chairman's side would receive and give to the chairman a message, perhaps something like this: 'Governor Hastings, of Pennsylvania, desires recognition.' The tall form of Pennsylvania's 140,000-majority Governor would be in the distance, but the chairman's notice. Now, however, he is seen, and officially recognized. The chairman announces that Governor Hastings has the floor. In the meantime the operator has reported the matter to the Pennsylvania delegation.

"I believe we could make this service a complete success, but a good many details must be worked out in advance, and if it is to be tried the gentlemen in charge of the convention arrangements should let me know at once."

To this we would add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health.
